Neighborhood gardens thriving with volunteers

Community. An unsightly park near JFK Airport has gotten a facelift thanks to helpful neighbors.

Fay D. Hill remembers a time when Springfield Park was rundown, full of dog waste and dumped garbage — where abandoned cars and guns were pulled out of the dredged lake.

Now the park, with planes taking off in the not-so-far distance from JFK Airport, is a picnic destination for families with strollers, cricket games and nearby factory workers on their breaks.

Hill, a retired legal secretary, had her first gardening victory growing peas in Jamaica as a child. She has lived in Springfield Gardens for the past 37 years and for her Springfield Park is now the Central Park of the outer boroughs.

"It's like an oasis, and to see the difference, now I see families walking hand in hand on the grass, having a glass of wine. That wasn't around at the time. They used to run out of there," Hill said.

About six years ago, Hill and a small group of volunteers stepped up to beautify the 23-acre park. They added flower beds and acquired hoses to water them, instead of relying on the previous method: hauling water from the park's lake.

Through a series of workshops with Partnership for Parks, Hill learned she could reach out to her local councilmember for capital and discretionary funds, hold fundraisers and solicit local businesses. The partnership is a joint program between the City Parks Department and City Parks Foundation that helps community members become advocates for their local parks.

Hill also started the nonprofit Volunteers for Springfield Park.

On Saturday, Hill is co-teaching a class at New York University School of Law on how community gardeners can fund-raise for their local parks. Some 400 community gardeners are expected to attend the day-long boot camp.

"It's not difficult, but you have to work at it," Hill said of the fundraising process.

Raising funds

Hill started the nonprofit because the independent funds can bypass the procurement and bidding process at the parks department. She's raised $500,000 in capital funds from Councilmember Donovan Richards, and more than $10,000 in other funds the park otherwise wouldn't have received.

Heather Lubov, executive director of the City Parks Foundation, said the parks department budget has decreased from 1.6 percent of the city's budget to half a percent over the last 50 years. "That means there's just not enough money to go around for parks," Lubov said.

Hazard. Asbestos found in roof of mayor's Gracie Mansion

Gracie Mansion / WIKIMEDIA

Cancer-causing asbestos has been found in the roof of Gracie Mansion and work crews will soon start removing it, reports the Associated Press.

Preparations to repair the roof were underway when the asbestos was found.

City Hall insists the asbestos has been contained and poses no danger to Mayor Bill de Blasio and New York City's first family. "Gracie Mansion is one of Manhattan's oldest structures, built more than 200 years ago, and as with many older homes, maintenance is necessary," mayoral spokesman Peter Kadushin told the AP. "Beginning this month, Gracie Mansion will undergo asbestos abatement and some long-needed roof repairs."

Repairs were being planned after the roof sprung several leaks over the winter months. The removal will cost taxpayers $250,000 and the eventual roof fix $3.4 million, AP says in the report posted on Newsday's website. JOHN A. OSWALD

Mayor, Schumer call for more funding for MTA

More money.

Federal funding for transportation has remained unchanged since 2009.

Mayor Bill de Blasio and Sen. Chuck Schumer rode the R train from Brooklyn to Manhattan on Tuesday in hopes of sending Congress a message: kill the partisan politics and fund long-term transportation investments.

De Blasio and Schumer, accompanied by city DOT commissioner Polly Trottenberg and Partnership for New York City President Kathryn S. Wylde, joined more than 300 leaders in 150 cities across the country for Stand Up for Transportation Day. The current federal transportation bill, funded by a gas tax, is set to expire on May 31.

"The bottom line is we need investment if we expect to have a society that works, if we expect to be able to get around, if we expect to be able to get to work," de Blasio said at a press conference later held at City Hall.

The MTA is currently facing a $15.2 billion deficit in the $32 billion capital program for 2015-2019. Transit officials have criticized the city for not investing their $100 million contribution, which has not increased over the past 30 years, and de Blasio

Quoted

"Can you help us out on this? We need your voice heard."

De Blasio, to R train commuters Thursday said the city will be "saying more about what we can do" for MTA funding.

"We need investment from Washington," de Blasio said. "And what we've seen in recent years is investment that has not even been close to meeting the needs of this city and so many other cities around the country."

MTA. ConEd crew eyed in main break that flooded 14th St. station

The 1, 2, and 3 subway lines were fully operational Thursday morning after a water main break turned the 14th Street station into Niagara Falls the night before.

Crews could be seen removing decrepit, corroded pieces of the main, which the FDNY said may have been broken by Con Ed workers on a job at 13th Street and Seventh, according to NBC New York.

FDNY Battalion

Chief John Porretto told reporters the station flooded with 18 inches of water. The MTA worked throughout the night to bring back full service, which had been limited between 42nd and Chambers streets.

About 500 passengers had to be evacuated.

The neighborhood around the intersection was still a mess during the morning commute and Seventh Avenue was a crawl with just one

Bus driver charged with choking rider

Open carryall. The dispute involved a passenger with a pooch who wouldn't get off the bus.

The incident happened aboard an MTA B6 bus. / YOUTUBE

A 19-year-old man who was armed with nothing but a cute, fluffy, white Maltese named "Minnie" was choked by a B6 bus driver in Brooklyn, according to the NYPD.

Cops charged the 49-year-old driver, Tousein Cummings, with criminal obstruction of breathing and unlawful imprisonment.

"He's been removed from service pending the outcome of an investigation," MTA spokesman Kevin Ortiz said of the 16-year-veteran driver from Long Island.

The accused's union on Thursday suggested the victim, identified by NBC New York as Giovanni Michaga, may have provoked the driver.

Cummings got into a dispute with the victim when Michaga refused his order to get off the bus with the dog Wednesday night.

The MTA forbids animals "unless enclosed in a container and carried in a manner which would not annoy other passengers."

Michaga had the dog in an open carry bag.

The alleged victim boarded the bus in Bath Beach and at some point Cummings allegedly got out of his driver's seat and put his hands around Michaga's neck, NBC says, citing sources.

"Our understanding is there was some provocation," Transit Workers Union 100 spokesman Jim Gannon told Metro.

The union will stand by Cummings, he added.

"Driving a bus in New York City is pretty stressful," he said. "The MTA rules are pretty clear about animals."

Michaga's sister defended her brother.

"Who tries to strangle anybody for bringing a dog on the bus?" Rosa Michaga told NBC. "That's crazy. It's unbelievable, actually."

Iranian leader: No sanctions or no deal

Negotiations.

The United States insists the lifting of sanctions will be a gradual process.

Iranian Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei on Thursday demanded that all sanctions on Iran be lifted at the same time as any final agreement with world powers on curbing Tehran's nuclear program is concluded.

Khamenei, the Islamic Republic's most powerful figure and who also has the last say on all state matters, was making his first comments on the interim deal reached last week in the Swiss city of Lausanne.

He repeated his faith in President Hassan Rouhani's negotiating team. But in remarks apparently meant to keep hardline loyalists on side, he warned about the "devilish" intentions of the United States.

"I neither support nor oppose the deal. Everything is in the details; it may be that the deceptive other side wants to restrict us in the details," Khamenei said in a speech broadcast live on state television.

His stand on the lifting of sanctions matched earlier comments by Rouhani, who said Iran would only sign a final nuclear accord if all measures imposed over its disputed atomic work are lifted on the same day.

"All sanctions should be removed when the deal is signed. If the sanctions removal depends on other processes, then why did we start the negotiations?" Khamenei said.

The U.S. State Department on Thursday repeated its position that sanctions against Iran would be removed gradually.

"Under the agreed-upon parameters, sanctions will be suspended in a phased manner upon verification that Iran has met specific commitments," State Department spokesman Jeff Rathke said.

He declined to react specifically to the Iranian leadership's comments.

Mistrust remains

Since relations with Washington collapsed after Iran's 1979 Islamic revolution, enmity toward the United States has always been a rallying point for Iranian hardliners.

- "I was never optimistic about negotiating with America. ... Nonetheless, I agreed to the negotiations and supported, and still support, the negotiators," Khamenei said to chants of "Death to America."

Liquid metal paves way for Terminators

The shape-shifting and self-propulsion abilities of a liquid metal alloy discovered by scientists at China's Tsinghua University has captured the imaginations of scientists and sci-fi fans.

The team has created what they believe could prove the first step toward developing a robot similar to the infamous T-1000 shape-shifting, liquid metal assassin from the "Terminator" movies. The device is made from a drop of metal alloy consisting mostly of gallium, which is a liquid at just under 30 degrees Celsius. Last year they discovered that an applied electrical current causes the gallium alloy to drastically alter its shape. REUTERS

STILL #BOSTONSTRONG

I was running on a wooded trail amid rocks and roots this week when a gremlin yanked my foot. I pitched forward, grabbed the air, and braced for a knee-scraping, wrist-breaking fall. My toes dug in, my legs churned, and miraculously I wobbled upright. I came to a safe stop with my heart thundering.

Then I went on running. This is what runners do: We keep going despite fatigue, calamity, and fear of what might come next. And we are doing it in unprecedented numbers.

According to RunningUSA, about 54 million Americans went for at least one run last year. Around 30 million do so on a regular basis. Every weekend, thousands blast down race courses in polyester shorts, shiny shoes and shirts that say things like "I may be slow, but I'm ahead of you!"

Opinion

TOM FOREMAN

CNN CORRESPONDENT AND AUTHOR OF THE UPCOMING BOOK "MY YEAR OF RUNNING DANGEROUSLY: A DAD, A DAUGHTER, AND A RIDICULOUS PLAN."

Some slide along like quicksilver rabbits. Others surge and gulp like stranded carp. I like them all because they take on challenges, rip optimism from the jaws of despair and keep standing up no matter what tries to put them down.

And they did not blink in the face of terror. They stood together.

After the Boston Marathon bombing, the races kept rolling. Runners kept gathering in welcoming herds, wearing ribbons for the victims, nodding respectfully to each other as the start was called, silently saying, "While we have to mourn our losses, we do not have to sacrifice our freedom. We do not have to live afraid."

I know it's a little thing, but it meant something to millions coast to coast: runners who will take to the roads, tracks and trails again this weekend in glorious freedom, while the marathon bomber — guilty on all 30 counts — will never run free again.

Five things you need to know

Judge tosses cameraman from ex-NFL star's murder trial

The judge in former New England Patriots star Aaron Hernandez's murder trial on Thursday barred a local television cameraman from the trial after he drove a truck that followed a bus full of jurors, saying the incident could have led to a mistrial.

The jury is in its third day of deliberations on whether Hernandez, 25, is guilty of murdering an associate, in the first of two murder trials he faces this year. After the jury in Fall River, Massachusetts, determines whether he killed semiprofessional football player Odin Lloyd, he will face a trial in Boston on charges of fatally shooting two Cape Verdean men outside a nightclub in 2012.

Bristol County Superior Court Judge Susan Garsh said two of the 15 jurors reported they had been followed by a truck from WHDH television and summoned the cameraman who had driven the truck, Robert Cusanelli, to court.

The cameraman said he had made no effort to interact with any of the jurors.

"I know that's forbidden," Cusanelli said.

Garsh said she would ban him from covering the rest of the trial but held off on an earlier threat to eject the station.

S.C. officer had prior excessive force complaint

South Carolina police officer Michael Slager was accused by a man of shooting him with a stun gun without cause in 2013, but was cleared of wrongdoing in an internal investigation. Also, last year, he was found to have failed to fill out an incident report, records show.

Slager has been fired after being charged with murder for shooting a black man in the back as he fled.

Forecasters predict below-average hurricane season

The Atlantic Ocean will see a "well below average" number of hurricanes this season due to cooler Caribbean waters and a strong El Nino effect, forecasters with Colorado State University predicted.

The university's Tropical Meteorology Project calls for seven named storms this year, with three reaching hurricane status, including one major hurricane with winds upward of 111 mph, CSU researchers estimate in their annual report.

Man gets probation for infant son's death in hot car

A Connecticut man who pleaded guilty to criminally negligent homicide after his 15-month-old son died when he was left unattended in the man's car on a hot July day was sentenced to non-supervised probation on Thursday.

Kyle Seitz, 37, of Ridgefield, Connecticut, was sentenced to two years conditional discharge, on the condition he is not arrested again on any other charge and goes to court-ordered counseling.

"Mr. Seitz has endured a sufficient level of suffering," said Superior Court Judge Kevin Russo said.

Samsung expects record Galaxy shipments, S6 edge shortage

Samsung expects record shipments for its new Galaxy S6 smartphones and said it will struggle to meet demand for the curved-edged version due to production constraints, adding to hopes for a turnaround in mobile sales.

The S6 models are widely expected to sell briskly following a string of positive reviews, boosting prospects for an earnings recovery in 2015. This week, the company estimated its January-March operating profit to be its highest in three quarters.

Sansa Stark is all grown up

Forget the weak little girl — this woman is taking charge on “Game of Thrones.”

EVA KIS
@thisiskis
eva.kis@metro.us

The breakout performance of last season’s “Game of Thrones” was definitely Sophie Turner, whose Sansa Stark got to turn the tables after enduring four years of torment by the Lannisters. Far from being a puppet at the hands of the master manipulator Littlefinger, she proved that she could hold her own when it came to scheming.

But what will she do with the chance to finally avenge her family? We asked Turner to tell us as much as she could without losing her head about Season 5, which premieres this Sunday at 9 p.m. on HBO.

People are so excited to see what’s next for Sansa.

In Season 5, we’re seeing the plan that Littlefinger has in store for Sansa, which is interesting. She’s very powerful — her and Littlefinger, it’s more that they’re like a duo rather than her taking control over him. He has the brains, and so does she, but she can really manipulate him to get what she wants. But she needs him as much as he needs her.

Did her time in King’s Landing change Sansa?

Definitely — watching

Read the rest of the interview at Metro.us.

Cersei, Margaery and Tyrion, how they work and how they get what they want: To do the right thing, they have to do the wrong thing first.

The show has its risqué moments. Will that be part of Sansa’s story?

With Sansa, I’ve always found her such an intellectual that I never thought that she would need to manipulate people through [sex]. So I think she has a lot better aspects than just that. But who knows what the future holds?

The Internet can be unkind about Sansa.

What’s been the most rewarding is being able to prove Sansa haters wrong. Slowly but surely, watching the look on people’s faces when they realize, “Oh, I think I got Sansa wrong.” But I don’t want to spoil anything — I want them to gradually realize how stupid they’ve been.

Who will win the Game of Thrones?

I want to see Littlefinger on the throne. As much as I want justice for characters like Daenerys or Jon Snow, Littlefinger would be amazing, or Varys, someone who knows how the game works and is very sneaky.

Sophie Turner, 19, is excited to show off Sansa’s darker side. GETTY IMAGES

Driven by love

Jaime Lannister's sword training will prove useful in the fifth season of "Game of Thrones." HBO

Nikolaj Coster-Waldau's Jaime Lannister is still ruled by his heart in the new season of "Game of Thrones."

EVA KIS
@thisiskis
eva.kis@metro.us

When it comes to family life, Jaime Lannister of "Game of Thrones" and his real-life alter ego, Nikolaj Coster-Waldau, couldn't have less in common. When we call at his home in Denmark to chat about the HBO series' fifth season, Coster-Waldau is in the middle of making dinner for his daughters, while the sounds of piano practice occasionally fill the background.

House Lannister, meanwhile, is the most vulnerable it's ever been in the show's four seasons. Its patriarch, Tywin Lannister, was murdered by his own son, Tyrion, who's now on the run.

"Tywin was a ruthless man, but Jaime — even though he found him very hard work — he was his dad, and he never in a million years imagined that Tyrion would kill him," says Coster-Waldau. "So there is grief in the beginning, but also Tyrion's actions have also put them all in a pretty difficult spot."

Without their father, and as armies from two corners of Westeros continue to push toward King's Landing, the Lannisters have their work cut out. And what about his on-again, off-again relationship with his sister, Cersei? Coster-Waldau sets the scene.

Jaime is a good man — how does he square that with loving the cruel Cersei?

For me, sometimes I go, "How long can he keep this up?" Does anyone really believe that it's set in stone, that once you've decided to love someone, you're going to have to keep doing it? Because he hasn't been getting a lot the other way. But he's a very loyal man to the people

Who will win the Game of Thrones?

They should just abolish the monarchy because it doesn't do them any favors. Let's get a democracy in there. But I would pick Bran Stark. I think he has potential.

he loves.

What can we look forward to this season?

The endgame is coming. This season is changing the dynamic of the show, and when we get to Episode 10, it will have significantly changed in quite a few ways.

Are you preparing to film Season 6?

That depends whether I survive this season.

I've heard that the hardest part of "Game of Thrones" can be keeping a straight face.

Without giving anything away, Tywin died and there's a scene where he's lying in state. Knowing Charles Dance, who is a joker and has extremely dry, British wit, it was very difficult to stand just looking at him. Even though he didn't do anything, but you kind of just knew that he would — it was very difficult for me and Lena [Headey, Cersei Lannister] to get through that scene.

Ryan Gosling directs

Iain De Caestecker plays a teenager who lives in a destitute urban wasteland (with a reservoir) in "Lost River," now in theaters and on VOD. BOLD FILMS

With "Lost River," the Canadian heartthrob steps behind the camera.

NED EHRBAR
@Nedrick
ned.ehrbar@metro.lu

"Lost River" is the first effort by a new writer and director named Ryan Gosling. Maybe you've heard of him. He's Canadian or something. We sat down with Gosling to discuss why the story of a young man and his mother (Iain De Caestecker and Christina Hendricks) trying to survive in the economic wasteland of Detroit spoke to him so strongly.

What was it about this story that made it right for your directorial debut?

I had written something when I was in my early 20s about child soldiers, and it was because I had gone to Uganda and Sudan, and I had an experience that I wanted to elaborate on. I tried for a while to get that film made, and I just couldn't. I just wasn't in a place in my career where I could make that happen. Then, you know, life happened and I was in more films, and then suddenly I went to Detroit, and I had a similar feeling where I just felt a real connection to the place and had an experience there that I wanted to share and elaborate on. Sometimes you have an experience where it's, "If I don't write this, no one will."

When you were putting this project together, was there pressure to star in it yourself?

It was definitely suggested that I be in the film, yeah. But my hat's off to guys that are acting and directing in their own films. They're making it look easy, and it's not. It took everything I had just to direct this film. I can't imagine being in it as well. This was all that I could do.

Aside from Christina Hendricks and your partner, Eva Mendes, you've got a Brit, a Scot, an Irishwoman and an Australian playing Detroit residents. What do you have against American actors?

Landyn [Stewart, the toddler who plays Hendricks' other son] is American, too! And he's Marlon Brando reincarnated. [Laughs] For the most part, I'd worked with everybody before, and I just wanted to work with my friends on this film. And, most of them, I had seen a side of them that I hadn't gotten to see in their work, and so I wanted to write for that.

How about the private sex-and-death club where Christina and Eva's characters work? Where did that come from?

It was based on the Grand Guignol and the Hell Cafe and the Death Cafe. All of these were part of a macabre entertainment scene in Paris in the early 1900s. At the Grand Guignol, they would put on these horror shows, murder theater, where they would kill people on stage. It was fake but very realistic, and it gave birth to horror films. At that time, for whatever reason, there was this real macabre entertainment scene and fascination with death.

The drowned towns motif is such a striking visual.

I grew up next to a river where I had found a road leading into it, and that's how I learned that they had sunken a bunch of towns to make this river. It's a totally surreal, true thing that happens, and it's very bizarre. I was going for a more literal version of what I had seen, which was a road going down into the water, but it was such a low-budget movie that we couldn't afford to go where there was one, and we couldn't afford to make one. And we just thought, "F— it, maybe lampposts will suggest it."

Kristen Stewart and Juliette Binoche on becoming besties

The actresses talk about hanging out in their new film "Clouds of Sils Maria."

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

When we spoke last October during the New York Film Festival, Kristen Stewart had not yet become the first-ever American actress to win a Cesar, the French Oscar, which she did for Olivier Assayas' "Clouds of Sils Maria." But she was still ecstatic. In the film, she plays Valentine, the harried but calm personal assistant of an actress played by Juliette Binoche. That allowed her to mock the film industry and the gossip machine from a safe remove.

Kristen, you were supposed to play the younger actress, played by Chloe Grace Moretz, but you insisted on the other role. Why?

That part is fantastic, but it's just not for me. It was something I knew so well that it wasn't interesting to me. I know Valentine so well. ... And there's more irony and more layers steeped in her dialogue if it's coming out of my mouth. I've been there, I've been smack-dab in the middle. To directly address the media and talk about what precarious bulls—t it can be sometimes and how we starvantly consume people — that was fun. I had to erase the glee from my face while saying those lines. [Laughs]

Juliette Binoche plays a famous international actress struggling to deal with her next film, alongside her personal assistant (Kristen Stewart), in "Clouds of Sils Maria." IFC FILMS

It's also very much a film about how an actor's life and roles can blend.

It's smart that it acknowledges you can never fully step outside yourself. It's delusional to think actors are playing other people.

It's always you. It's versions of you, but it's going to take a toll. It fills you back up with something else, but at the end of the day it's taxing. [laughs]

You and Binoche have such a comfortable rapport.

If we didn't, the movie would not have been good. Because I am not a liar. This woman makes me think more than most people that I've worked with. I'm constantly sitting there in between everything, [thinking]. She perplexes me a little bit, which is absolutely the right dynamic. We didn't have to fake it.

Talking to Juliette Binoche

"Clouds of Sils Maria" reunites Binoche with director Olivier Assayas, who co-wrote 1985's "Rendez-vous," her big break. Prior to "Clouds," the two worked on 2008's "Summer Hours," but she was only part of the ensemble. "I was a little frustrated on 'Summer Hours,' as an actress. I thought he was shy and hiding," she recalls. So she suggested they make another film, and he came back with a script that featured a 50-something actress not dealing well with aging. "I was shocked! I didn't expect it to be that way at all. I was provoking him," she says, emitting a huge, hearty laugh, "and I got slapped back!"

As for her onscreen friendship with Stewart, it's pretty much accurate to the real one. "When you like someone, you like someone. We became close in a natural way."

Binoche and Stewart attend the Cesar Awards, at which the latter won Best Supporting Actress for their film "Clouds of Sils Maria."

'The Longest Ride' is one of the boring Nicholas Sparks movies

@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

For the 10th adaptation of a Nicholas Sparks literary tome, Hollywood turns to a book that's essentially two love stories. In one, New York-bound aspiring art curator Sophia (Britt Robertson) finds herself improbably falling for a Texas bull rider (Scott Eastwood). In the other, Alan Alda plays Ira, a cranky old-timer who tells Robertson about his youth, when he was a vet (played by Jack Huston) trying to save his marriage.

The lowdown: There isn't just one kind of Nicholas Sparks movie. There are the merely grossly, snicker-inducingly manipulative ("The Notebook," "A Walk to Remember"). There are the stark raving mad flights of insanity ("Safe Haven," last year's "The Best of Me"). And there are the ones that seem somehow insufficiently cornball, almost subtle — in other words, boring. "The Longest Ride" belongs in the last group, alongside "Dear John." It's a weepie that smashes together the Holocaust, bull riding and Alan Alda, and yet still doesn't achieve cheesy transcendence.

Ira's story is supposed

A six-pack bull rider (Scott Eastwood) shows his sensitive (but macho) side to an aspiring New Yorker (Britt Robertson) in the Nicholas Sparks movie "The Longest Ride." MICHAEL TACKETT to inspire Sophia to accept the sacrifices that come from impractical relationships. But it's a pretty vague theme, and whether Sophia will give up her corrosive north-eastern urban existence to bum about in the pure Deep South with a six-pack stud (who is nice and charming so long as he doesn't have to look at snooty modern art) is less wrestled with than stalled till the end. It's all Sparks movie autopilot: There are sun-dappled shots of lovers sitting together, smiling and staring. There are at least three instances of Huston giving his wife (Oona Chaplin) a gift and her jumping on him in joy. There's the token gratuitous shot of our male lead looking strapping — here a brief scene of him in a white tee transferring logs. (Sparks films offer equal-opportunity leering, which is a nice change.) "The Longest Ride" merely serves as a reminder that Sparks can't win: damned if he makes effective trash; damned if he doesn't quite.

Gonzalez's album "Vestiges &amp; Claws" is out now. MALIN JOHANSSON

How Jose Gonzalez is embracing his dark side

The singer-songwriter tells us how the state of humanity influenced his new album — but on a lighter note, working with Ben Stiller was fun.

LINDA LABAN
@metronewyork
letters@metro.us

After two albums with his longtime band Junip, Swedish indie folk artist Jose Gonzalez returns to his more familiar guise for a third solo album, "Vestiges & Claws." But this time, he colored his musical palette a few shades darker.

Softly sinister

"I was playing acoustic guitar and singing, but I had not found a way to have some darker elements in the music and the lyrics," Gonzalez says of his songwriting evolution. He describes the songs on the new album as childlike at first and then passive-aggressive. "To me, it gives a sinister impression," he says.

Universal appeal

Instead of using the songwriting process as a time of self-reflection, Gonzalez says he looked outward, writing about humanity as a whole. "I always try to find [as wide a] view as possible," he says. "That becomes more interesting to me, [when a song] doesn't have just one meaning. I love it when a lyric doesn't feel specific to me."

Despite the album's dark themes, influenced in part by a barrage of gruesome world news, Gonzalez says he still feels positive about the state of society: "Violence is just one feeling you get from watching the news. But if you look at a wider time frame, it isn't so bad. If you're just watching the news, then it doesn't look so good, but I'm optimistic about certain parts."

"I love it when a lyric doesn't feel specific to me."

Jose Gonzalez

When Ben Stiller calls, you pick up

Gonzalez is a serious guy, but he admits to being a big Ben Stiller fan. So when the comedian, actor and director contacted Gonzalez and asked him to curate music for Stiller's 2013 remake of "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty," he absolutely took the call.

"That was a wow moment," Gonzalez chuckles. "When my manager mentioned that Ben Stiller wanted to call me, I was like, 'What?' Then I got the script and read it and started to prepare and see what I could do. When Ben called, that was quite a moment for me."

Letters to the editor

Rand Paul is nothing new

Re: 'Don't bring America back' (Metro, April 9)

The fact is, a presidential candidate saying that they intend to "take the country back" is not a new slogan. When letter writer Larry Blong saw a Republican say it, he created his own meaning. Rand Paul is a libertarian. President Bush was a moderate at best. Paul likely was referring to a Jefferson/Madison presidency of limited government. Also, Mr. Blong implied that Bush was responsible for the financial collapse of 2008 even though it was Bill Clinton who repealed the law that prevented banks from becoming "too big to fail." Republicans supported the repeal too, so there is enough blame to go around without claiming a presidential candidate wants to return to an economic collapse.

KEVIN METZ, VIA EMAIL

Help the other victim

Of course, my heart has gone out to the family and friends of Nicholas Figueroa, but I think it must also be remembered that another person also lost his life in the East Village explosion. From the reporting, it does not appear that Mr. Moises Locon had such a large circle of friends and family here to remind us all of the value of his life or to advocate for his memory. I think many New Yorkers would also like to contribute to honoring this man, who was humbly doing his job to help his family.

Yanks and Sox back at it

The last time the Red Sox and Yankees met, Derek Jeter took the field for the final time in his illustrious 20-year MLB career. Amid the No. 2 hoopla, the two team actually played a game that late September day at Fenway and the Yankees were victorious, 9-5. With the win, New York took the 2014 season series from Boston, 12-7. The rivalry is back on Friday, with the Yanks hosting the Red Sox (7 p.m., YES). Nathan Eovaldi and Wade Miley will make their respective team debuts in the first 2015 meeting between the two clubs. In Game 2 Saturday (1 p.m., FS1) of the three-game set, the Yanks will send Adam Warren to the mound. Masahiro Tanaka will be back on the hill Sunday night against Boston.

Young, Lopez sparking sudden Nets resurgence

NBA. With four games left in the regular season, Brooklyn is closing in on the playoffs.

As the NBA's regular season begins its home stretch, and the jockeying for playoff position intensifies, the Brooklyn Nets have amazingly flipped the switch and have gone from also-rans to a real postseason threat.

Brooklyn is 7-3 in its last 10 games. The Nets are seemingly hitting their stride at the right time, and since their trade deadline dealing for versatile veteran Thaddeus Young, Brooklyn has gelled and come together. Once thought of as an underachieving unit, it's been the steady hand of Young and the re-emergence of center Brook Lopez that have pushed the Nets over the hump.

Young has spearheaded a frontline that has been rather dominant since he was traded from Minnesota for future Hall of Famer Kevin Garnett. Young has been on some really bad teams in recent years since his last postseason appearance in 2012, but he obviously hasn't forgotten how to lead and be a solid

By the numbers

4

The Nets have four games remaining in the regular season, with three of the four coming against current East playoff teams. Brooklyn faces the Wizards, Bucks, Bulls and Magic.

complementary figure. His presence has especially allowed Lopez to flourish lately, as the stretch-four has opened up the interior and mid-range game for the pivot.

Lopez, for his part, has looked rejuvenated. He's fresh off being honored with the Eastern Conference Player of the Week award where the 7-footer averaged 28.8 points, 8.5 rebounds, and 2.25 blocked shots.

Young, at 6-foot-8 and 225 pounds, is not the prototypical power forward in a Hollins system. But what the lefty lacks in girth, he makes up for with great defensive timing and grit, and is enough of a 3-point threat to become a valuable late-game participant.

Sports news you need to know

Harvey looks lights out

Matt Harvey pitched like it was 2013 Thursday in D.C. as he routinely hit the high 90s with his fastball and pitched six scoreless innings in his first MLB game since Tommy John surgery. Harvey allowed just four hits total, walking just one and striking out nine in an impressive 6-3 Mets win over the Nationals. The Mets are at Atlanta this weekend.

Prokhorov backtracks

Nearly three months after Nets owner Mikhail Prokhorov hired an investment banking firm to explore a sale of the team, the Russian billionaire said this week that he is "very committed" to the franchise.

"For the time being, nothing is on the table, and as soon as we hear of any changes in capital structure, we'll announce it in a very open way as we usually do," Prokhorov told ESPN.

Sefolosha broke leg in NYC incident

Atlanta's Thabo Sefolosha fractured his tibia and will miss the NBA playoffs, according to ESPN. Sefolosha is said to have been injured while resisting arrest after an incident in which Indiana's Chris Copeland was stabbed. MATT BURKE
